➤ In the News

Phil Steinhauer, company owner, planned a very unique way to help the company and our employees give back to the community. "As an owner, I went back to our company's mission statement for inspiration." What started as leadership training ended up being a heartfelt donation to local kids in need. After a leadership training session, our staff was divided up into 14 groups of 3 to put together a bicycle. When the bicycles were built, 14 children from the Boy's and Girl's club came into the room where they were matched up to their team and given a bicycle, helmet and lock. One child was overheard saying, "See, I told you Santa Claus would come this year!" Designscapes Colorado employees, some in tears, were so moved by this experience that a few days later at the company holiday party we made donations in Phil's name to the Dumb Friends League and St. Jude Hospital. What an inspiring way to pay it forward!
